For Designer Jacklynn Little, every project begins with a hunt for the perfect fabrics, and her own bedroom was no exception.

It all started with a beautiful fabric from Schumacher by Mary McDonald paired with a beautiful color palette of black, green, chartreuse, and soothing neutrals in taupe, gray, and cream. This fabric, a symphony of color and its pattern, set the stage for the bedroom's aesthetic and design, combining Jacklynn's love for contemporary elements with the timeless allure of traditional French design.

For the walls, she opted for a timeless neutral wallpaper and a coordinating Benjamin Moore paint color ensuring versatility for future style transformations. Introducing pops of color through side tables adds depth to the room however, Jacklynn selected a dresser in a different color to make it more interesting. The infusion of fresh green elements gives the room a touch of vitality, making it both inviting and elegantly sophisticated.
